Here's Why:

In this two-day course you will:

- learn protocols that prevent the dissemination of pathogens into the patient's bloodstream, eliminating the source of problems such as heart disease, strokes, diabetes, and arthritis which medical science has determined are often associated with gum disease.
- learn how to confidently diagnose, classify and monitor periodontal infections with the help of the microscope.
- gain knowledge of natural modalities that are often more effective than antibiotics.
- learn to quickly and confidently lead your clients and patients to oral health without sending them out of your office.
- see your office productivity increase substantially with no additional work or staff.

Treating the patient holistically improves the status of your office both in knowledge and in the scope of caring. And, it also makes periodontal scaling a pleasant, easy experience rather than an unpleasant manual job.
